OPINIONS OF THE PRESS

ON THE FIRST APPEARANCE OF

THE A B C RAILWAY GUIDE IN 1853.

"L'Ecriture dit quelque part: Celui qui consent à être A B C sera L E V; et l'Ecriture a raison, et les rationels auteurs du petit ouvrage qui présentent crânement les trois premières lettres de l'alphabet comme le titre de leur publication, ont raison; aussi ont-ils d'emblée par le fait de leur apparition porté le trouble dans l'âme des Bradshaws, de ces prétendus guides qui ne sont pas à toucher du doigt tant ils sont sales, et qui sont d'ailleurs tellement stupides qu'il est impossible au voyageur d'y trouver le renseignement qu'il cherche. Avec l'A B C c'est chose toute différente, un aveugle y trouverait son chemin. Il est impossible, selon nous, d'être plus clairement intelligible que ne l'est l'A B C. Il se peut que Bradshaw continue à être le plus vendu, la routine est une si belle chose! mais encore un peu de temps et l'A B C sera le vade mecum de tout homme intelligent à la recherche de ce qui, dans Bradshaw, est réellement l'inconnu, à la recherche d'une station quelconque..... de chemin de fer. Nous recommandons l'H A de l'A B C, urbi et orbi; il n'y a qu'un E B T qui puisse se refuser A O T de sa bourse un sixpence, à l'effet d'H T l'A B C; pour notre part, nous ne doutons pas que Bradshaw lui-même, avant l'E T, ne soit forcé de partager notre I D, et que, se trouvant D K V, il ne soupire sotto voce G V Q; à quoi nous ajouterons par forme de vœu antique: puisqu'il est F A C du nombre des vivants.....que la terre lui soit légère!"—Petites Affiches de Londres.

"The A B C, or Alphabetical Railway Guide, shows, as it is said, at a glance how and when you can go from London to the different stations in Great Britain, and return; together with the fares, distances, population, &c. We have carefully looked through this new railway time-table. The plan is admirable. The information is given to a person precisely as he wants and much useful information is given which cannot be found elsewhere. We have often been puzzled to find by ordinary time-table-books the information we want. The new book before us is as clear and simple as can be. If we wish to go from London to any place in the country, we have only to turn to the name of that town, which, under an alphabetical arrangement, is readily found, and there we are plainly told the stations from London from which we have to start, the times of all the trains leaving them, when they arrive, and what they return fares; the population, &c."—Herald Journal.

"In the Guide before us the different railway stations are arranged in an alphabetical order, on the plan of a dictionary, consequently the reference is as much easy as A B C.' This railway directory is really a splendid hit, and must soon supersede all in use. Its extreme facility for reference, accuracy, and trifling cost (6*d.*), will ensure for this Guide an immense circulation. It is to be published monthly."—The Lancet.

"The most formidable rival to 'Bradshaw' that we have yet seen. 'Bradshaw' gives the time-table of each Company in tabular form: his 'Guide' is a collection of the various companies' time-tables. The 'A B C Guide' throws the time-tables into Gazetteer form, which, of course, greatly simplifies the process of ascertaining the line, cost, and time of transit to or from the metropolis."—Christian Times.

"A very useful publication for those who are puzzled by the complicated time-tables of official lists. Every place is set down from which a London train starts appears alphabetically, with the times of departure and arrival, the fare, and some statistics —Spectator.

OPINIONS OF THE PRESS.

"We have been so puzzled this autumn th the complicated maturity of Brad- w that we welcome with interest this w and admirable plan of showing at a nce the hours of departure and arrival all the trains between London and er stations in Great Britain in alpha- ical order. It will prove a most use- pocket companion to the traveller to l from London."—Literary Gazette, tober 8, 1853.

"As a monthly Guide, this new 'A B C' e certainly is the easiest, and really st convenient in all respects, that has n offered to the public. For ladies ticularly, Mr. Tweedie's little book l be found most acceptable. There is fear of being half-an hour plodding r the down trains instead of the up. e has but to look for the town we ire to travel to, and it is found in a ment. We wish the 'A B C' every cess. It is cheap and very neatly got and a sixpennyworth nobody should without."—Civil Service Gazette, 1853.

"The unintelligibility of 'Railway ides,' and 'Railway Time Tables,' ost as difficult to understand as a blem in Euclid is to solve, has long n the complaint of travellers; and e we have the first attempt of which are aware to give persons wanting to ke excursions for business or pleasure means of ascertaining, almost at a nce, the station from which, and the es when, the trains start for any given lity from London; and from that lity to the metropolis. The fares, l the distance of the various cities and ns from the stations are also given, h their population—a piece of infor- tion useful to some travellers on com- rcial speculations, in whose case it uld not 'pay' to go to towns with an ignificant number of inhabitants. The vns to which passengers are conveyed m the different termini in London are anged in alphabetical order, and the ticulars we have named inserted after h. The routes of the different com- ies from the metropolis are given at end of the Alphabetical Guide, of ich every railway traveller should pos- himself—The labour of arranging compiling this 'Guide' must have n immense; and only an enormous at the low price fixed, can pay the olisher."—Naval and Military Gazette.

"INCOMPREHENSIBILITY has hitherto n the principle characteristic of rail- guide-books, until to be as incompre- sible as one of these Pythian volumes become a received interpretation of all that can be imagined of bewilderment, perplexity, and doubt. The compilers of the 'A B C Guide' have come forward to the assistance of the travelling public with a guide, showing at a glance how and when to go from London to the different stations in Great Britain and return. This is precisely the sort of information which the public require, and the compilers have done good service in supplying it. The old system of guide-books is defective in this respect—that, instead of making the point of destination the first thing to be found, it left the ignorant and perplexed traveller to search the tables of two or three companies before he could obtain the information he required, the index only giving him a clue to the principal towns along the line. In the 'A B C Guide,' the stations, and consequently the towns, can be found in alphabetical order. The reader can thus ascertain by what station he is to leave town, what number of miles he has to travel, at what period he will arrive at his destination (accidents excepted), and what is the fare he has to pay. Upon these points the anxiety of the reader is at once set at rest. He can go on his way rejoicing, assured that his course is as plain as A B C, and that he has nothing further to annoy him on this score. The routes of the different companies are given at the end of the book, and the traveller is supplied with requisite information in the smallest possible space. The book is compiled with considerable ingenuity, and the design is excellent."—Morning Post.

"Bradshaw meets a serious rival in The A B C, or Alphabetical Railway Guide, showing at a glance how and when you can go from London to the different stations in Great Britain and return; together with the fares, distances, population, &c. The towns are arranged alphabetically, and divided from each other with such distinctness, that the traveller lights upon the one he requires almost instantaneously. Underneath it he finds the times at which the trains leave London and arrive at the town, and the times at which they leave the town and arrive in London. By a beautifully simple contrivance, he gains at the same moment the fares of each class to the place treated of, the number of miles from London, and the population. At the end of the Guide, the routes of the different companies are given. The 'Guide' is to be published monthly, and will, no doubt, be still further improved before another issue. It promises to become a real blessing for railway travellers."—Weekly News and Chronicle.

"This is by far the best Railway Guide, or Vade Mecum, which has yet been designed; indeed, for facility of reference and fulness of information, we do not see how it could be improved upon. The only defect we can perceive is in a portion of its title; for in the title-page it only professes to show, how and when you go from London to the stations in Great Britain and return; whereas it very clearly points out also how and when, and in what time, you can go from any one station in a given line to any other in the same line. We will, however, return to this point, when we have explained the plan of compilation adopted in the A B C Guide, very appropriately so denominated, because the child's A B C primer is not more easy to be understood. All the railway stations throughout the kingdom are arranged alphabetically, so that it might be called a 'Railway Dictionary.' The first thing shown is on what metropolitan line or lines the provincial station you wish to reach is situated, and the fares for the different classes of trains, first, second, third, or parliamentary. The next thing shown is, at what times the different trains start from the London terminus, and at what times they arrive at the station where your journey is to end; and, vice versâ, at what times you can start on your return journey from the latter station, and at what times reach the metropolitan station. The class of each train is distinctly indicated, the affix of the letter a signifying a first-class train, b a second-class, c a third-class, p a parliamentary train, m mail train, and x an express one. The population also of each town which enjoys the convenience of a railway station is also given—a matter of some importance to commercial travellers—and likewise its distance from London. An alphabet, or dictionary, is appended, showing the direct routes of the different metropolitan lines, and also of their branches, and the distance of each station from the London termini. Thus, under the head of the Great Western road, we find that it runs through Ealing, Hanwell, Southall, West Drayton and Langley, Slough, Maidenhead and Twyford to Reading, a side line running from Slough to Windsor. From Reading we also find that two subsidiary branches run, one through Mortimer to Basingstoke, and the other through Theale, Aldermaston, Woolhampton, Thatcham, Newbury, and Kintbury to Hungerford. Having travelled with our 'Guide' over the branch lines, we are back into the main lines at Reading: that it continues through Pangbourne, Goring, and Wallingford to Didcot, whence again a branch diverges through the Abingdon Road to Oxford; from Oxford a subsidiary line carries us from Oxford through Worcester, Kidderminster, and Dudley, and another by the Woodstock Road, Heyford, Banbury, Leamington, Warwick, and many other places to Birmingham. We are then once more brought back again into the main line at Didcot, and the same process of explanation is continued until we arrive by the sea at Plymouth: the distance from London of every station on the main line, its branches, and subsidiary lines being, we have said, given throughout.

"To find at what times of the day and in what space of time you can travel from one intermediate station to another on the same line, all you have to do is to refer to the information under the heads of the stations. Thus, on the South Western, if you wish to travel from Farnborough to Winchester, under the head of Farnborough you will find when the next trains arrive therefrom, and under the head of Winchester also when they respectively reach there.

"We will only add that popular 'Bradshaw's Railway Guide' has been a clumsy and confused compilation compared with the 'A B C Guide.'"—Mercantile Journal.

"We can strongly recommend this monthly record of the railway traffic as supplying the great defect of Bradshaw's manuals, viz., the toil required in obtaining the particular information from the mass of compressed time-tables. Few mathematical processes can bear any comparison with the demand of intellectual research made by our Bradshaws; and the proprietors of this little compendium deserve great credit for having supplied us with so easy a road to a very necessary branch of knowledge."—Inquirer.

"Time-tables are becoming less mathematical, the spirit of progress has affected them figuratively. The distinguishing difference between Bradshaw and A B C is that the one is a continuation of time-tables—easier to understand than heretofore, but still a labyrinth to the uninitiated traveller—the other an arrangement so simplified that a reference to the initial letter of any town shows at what time, and at what cost, those places are accessible; a parallel column gives the time of return and other information. These are palpable advantages, but in Bradshaw they are all 'seen as through a glass—dimly.'"—Derbyshire Courier.

HOLLOWAY'S OINTMENT and PILLS. DYSENTERY, DIARRHŒA, &c.—During the Summer season these diseases exact numberless victims from the thoughtless of any age or either sex. The first derangement of the stomach is neglected, and first irritation succeeded by inflammation soon extends into the bowels. In some severe cases medicines, given internally, only aggravate the malady. What a blessing is it, then, that Holloway's Ointment, rubbed externally over the abdomen, can arrest and cure the complaint! After being rubbed the abdomen should be loosely swathed in flannel, to afford support and uniformity of temperature. Farinaceous food alone should be taken. Whenever practicable, Holloway's Pills should be administered in appropriate doses, unless increased irritation follow their use, when the cure can be accomplished by the Ointment. [290

HINTS TO RAILWAY TRAVELLERS.

Before proceeding on your journey, buy a copy of the A B C Railway Guide. There you will find that the Editor has already solved for you the mysteries of Railway complications, and has presented the information you require in clear and concise form.

Your Luggage should be securely packed in a strong box, or solid portmanteau, and it is important that your name and address should appear in full on every article.

As almost every person is now an occasional traveller, it would be well for each to provide him- self with a proper Travelling Equipage, with his name and address engraved on a plate permanently affixed thereto. These will be sup- plied at a small cost by any respectable Railway outfitter.

On Continental Railways the Passenger's Fare does not include the carriage of luggage, but a separate and additional charge is made for it.

This custom has never prevailed in this country, but it has been the practice to calculate the fare so as to embrace an average quantity of luggage. The rule varies on different lines, but generally first-class passengers are allowed free 150 lbs. weight; second-class, 100 lbs.; and third- class, 56 lbs. All excess is liable to a heavy charge. If there be any reason to suspect that the weight of your luggage will exceed this scale, it would be best to forward the whole by Goods train a day or two before the contemplated journey. An exception to this rule is sometimes made in favour of the samples of commercial gen- tlemen, but this exception is not uniformly ad- mitted.

Avoid packing in Small Parcels, for they will prove a fruitful source of anxiety and trouble during the journey: have, indeed, as few packages as possible; and, after having seen that they are properly addressed, leave them in the charge of the Guard, who will deliver them to you at the termination of your journey. By no means thrust Bulky Packages under the seat of the carriage. Your property will not be any safer in your own custody than in that of the Guard, and, beside, in getting it in and out of the carriage, it will probably prove an inconvenience to your fellow-passengers. In the multiplicity of Rail- way affairs it may sometimes happen that, after all your precaution, your Luggage may be mis-sent. If this accident should occur, give notice of it immediately, and, for farther safety, write on the first opportunity to

E. MORRISON, Esq.,
Railway Clearing-house, Euston Square, London.

This gentleman receives daily, from every first- class station in the kingdom, information of all missing luggage, and an application to him will generally afford a clue to the missing articles, unless they have been positively stolen.

The Railway Companies do not hold themselves responsible for Lug- gage unless it be Booked; and Parcels of great value must be declared as such, and In- sured, according to each Company's regulated charges. Neither are the Companies accountable for articles left in the carriages or "waiting- rooms," but such things are deposited in a room, and properly labelled, with the date, train, &c., upon which they are found. They are kept for a period of twelve months, when, if no claimant ap- pears, they are advertised, and sold by auction, the proceeds going to the Company's general revenue.

For the better security of the property of pas- sengers a "Cloak-room" is provided at the principal stations. Here articles may be left in charge of the Company's servant for a charge of 1d. or 2d. each; it is, therefore, wiser for pas- sengers to avail themselves of this provision than to leave their property unprotected, and run the risk of its entire loss.

Be sure to be at the Station several minutes before the time for the departure of the train by which you propose to travel. Hurried excitement and bustle will throw you into a perspiration, which will be fatal to all com- fort during your ride, and will expose you to the danger of catching cold.

Many travellers boast of their dexterity in catching the train at the last moment, but this habit displays a foolish vanity, and is attended with many risks. Be careful that the book- ing-clerk gives correct change and a proper ticket, as mistakes cannot be easily rectified after you have left the counter. Your ticket should afterwards be carefully preserved, for if it be lost you will be required to repay your entire fare. Should the ticket be afterwards found, or should other evidence satisfy the managers that you really did pay your fare at the proper time, the second fare will be returned, but this process of proof will subject you to much inconve- nience and delay. To obviate this danger a Ticket-holder has been invented, which may be hung round the neck by a small ribbon, or may be attached to the button of the coat by an elastic cord. It may be had at the stall of every station for a few pence. Besides securing the ticket from danger, it is always within reach when passengers are summoned to answer to the peremptory call, "Tickets ready."

If you have the opportunity select a seat with the back to the motion: thus you will avoid an annoying and dangerous draught which always blows on the opposite side. But should these favourite seats be already occupied, do not persist in having all the windows closed. It will generally be enough to close that one on the side from which the wind blows. Fresh air is of greater importance even than the avoidance of draughts, and, indeed, a Railway-carriage full of passengers, and with all the windows closed, will soon be filled with vitiated air that is insuf- ferable, and suggestive only of the Black Hole of Calcutta. An improvement in the construction of Railway-carriages, which would secure ample ventilation irrespective of the windows, has long been demanded, but has not yet been attained. It is true that in some modern carriages small venti- lators have been introduced above the windows, but these are very imperfect, and beside, in un- pardonable ignorance, they are often closed by a class of travellers who have an invincible repug- nance to fresh air.

Digitized by Google

To fortify yourself against cold and draughts a little attention to simple preparations is all that is required. A cap for gentlemen and a hood for ladies will sufficiently protect the face and neck. A rug will also add materially to comfort.

Smoking is strictly prohibited in Railway-carriages and at all Railway Stations. This is an excellent rule, and no gentleman of good breeding and of correct taste will ever attempt to infringe it. The fumes of tobacco soon fill the limited area of a carriage, add to the impurity of the air, already vitiated, and in many instances have caused persons to be seized with violent illness.

On no account whatever should passengers attempt to enter or to quit a carriage while it is in motion. Many sad accidents have resulted from this indiscretion, and therefore, by the bye-laws of every Railway Company, it is made an offence which very properly subjects the offender to a fine of 40*s*.

For the accommodation of Invalids require to travel in a reclining posture riages are provided on most of the ... but, as this is a special arrangement sary to give three days' notice to the Manager, and he will direct a proper be in attendance at any station, and indicated in the instructions conveyed

"We have been so puzzled this autumn with the complicated maturity of Bradshaw that we welcome with interest this new and admirable plan of showing at a glance the hours of departure and arrival of all the trains between London and other stations in Great Britain in alphabetical order. It will prove a most useful pocket companion to the traveller to and from London."—Literary Gazette, October 8, 1853.

"As a monthly Guide, this new 'A B C' one certainly is the easiest, and really most convenient in all respects, that has been offered to the public. For ladies particularly, Mr. Tweedie's little book will be found most acceptable. There is no fear of being half-an-hour plodding over the down trains instead of the up. One has but to look for the town we desire to travel to, and it is found in a moment. We wish the 'A B C' every success. It is cheap and very neatly got up, and a sixpennyworth nobody should be without."—Civil Service Gazette, 1853.

"The unintelligibility of 'Railway Guides,' and 'Railway Time Tables,' almost as difficult to understand as a problem in Euclid is to solve, has long been the complaint of travellers; and here we have the first attempt of which we are aware to give persons wanting to make excursions for business or pleasure the means of ascertaining, almost at a glance, the station from which, and the times when, the trains start for any given locality from London; and from that locality to the metropolis. The fares, and the distance of the various cities and towns from the stations are also given, with their population—a piece of information useful to some travellers on commercial speculations, in whose case it would not 'pay' to go to towns with an insignificant number of inhabitants. The towns to which passengers are conveyed from the different termini in London are arranged in alphabetical order, and the particulars we have named inserted after each. The routes of the different companies from the metropolis are given at the end of the Alphabetical Guide, of which every railway traveller should possess himself.—The labour of arranging and compiling this 'Guide' must have been immense; and only an enormous sale, at the low price fixed, can pay the publisher."—Naval and Military Gazette.

"INCOMPREHENSIBILITY has hitherto been the principle characteristic of railway guide-books, until to be as incomprehensible as one of these Pythian volumes has become a received interpretation of all that can be imagined of bewilderment, perplexity, and doubt. The compilers of the 'A B C Guide' have come forward to the assistance of the travelling public with a guide, showing at a glance when and when to go from London to the different stations in Great Britain and return. This is precisely the sort of information which the public require, and the compilers have done good service in supplying it. The old system of guide-books is defective in this respect—that, instead of making the point of destination the first thing to be found, it left the ignorant and perplexed traveller to search the table of two or three companies before he could obtain the information he required, the index only giving him a clue to the principal towns along the line. In the 'A B C Guide,' the stations, and consequently the towns, can be found in alphabetical order. The reader can thus ascertain by what station he is to leave town, what number of miles he has to travel, at what time he will arrive at his destination (accidents excepted), and what is the fare he has to pay. Upon these points the anxiety of the reader is at once set at rest. He can go on his way rejoicing, assured that his course is as plain as A B C, and that he has nothing further to annoy him on that score. The routes of the different companies are given at the end of the book, and the traveller is supplied with requisite information in the smallest possible space. The book is compiled with considerable ingenuity, and the design is excellent."—Morning Post.

"Bradshaw meets a serious rival in The A B C, or Alphabetical Railway Guide, showing at a glance how and when you can go from London to the different stations in Great Britain and return: together with the fares, distances, population, &c. The towns are arranged alphabetically, and divided from each other with such distinctness, that the traveller lights upon the one he requires almost instantaneously. Underneath it he finds the times at which the trains leave London and arrive at it, and the times at which they leave the town and arrive in London. By this beautifully simple contrivance, he sees at the same moment the fares of each class to the place treated of, the number of miles from London, and the population. At the end of the Guide, the routes of the different companies are given. The 'Guide' is to be published monthly, and will, no doubt, be still further improved before another issue. It promises to become a real blessing for railway travellers."—Weekly News and Chronicle.

TRAVELLERS by RAILWAY may escape colds and enjoy the comfort of breathing pure air at an agreeable temperature in the coldest weather by using

MR. JEFFREYS'S RESPIRATOR.

The wholesale agent to the manufacturer of these important instruments begs to inform sufferers from irritation in the throat and lungs that it was to give comfort to these organs invented an instrument able duly to warm and moisten each entering breath, so as to give genial and portable climate for them, and that to effect this with the least possible obstruction currents of the breath inwards and outwards that elaborate and delicate combination of highly conducting metal for which he introduced the name Respirator is essential. It was struction which, by benefiting thousands annually, has given a world-wide celebrity to the

It is of the utmost importance to discern between the genuine effects of the true Respirator the deceptive effects of merely keeping out cold by a partial obstruction of the breath so undermining to the health. No prudent person could even as a matter of economy and delicate organs, upon the safety of which life depends, to any but the most perfect producible by art. The manufacturers could easily produce showy articles at one-third yielding a much larger profit.

HINTS TO RAILWAY TRAVELLERS.

ore proceeding on your journey, buy a copy A B C Railway Guide. There ill find that the Editor has already solved u the mysteries of Railway complications, as presented the information you require in r and concise form.

r Luggage should be securely packed trong box, or solid portmanteau, and it is tant that your name and address should r in full on every article.

almost every person is now an occasional ler, it would be well for each to provide him- ith a proper Travelling Equipage, is name and address engraved on a plate nently affixed thereto. These will be sup- t a small cost by any respectable Railway er.

Continental Railways the Passenger's does not include the carriage of luggage, separate and additional charge is made for his custom has never prevailed in this y, but it has been the practice to calculate are so as to embrace an average quantity of e. The rule varies on different lines, but lly first-class passengers are allowed free . weight; second-class, 100 lbs.; and third- 56 lbs. All excess is liable to a heavy . If there be any reason to suspect that ight of your luggage will exceed this scale, ld be best to forward the whole by Goods a day or two before the contemplated y. An exception to this rule is sometimes in favour of the samples of commercial gen- , but this exception is not uniformly ad- l.

id packing in Small Parcels, for they rove a fruitful source of anxiety and trouble the journey: have, indeed, as few packages sible; and, after having seen that they are ly addressed, leave them in the charge of ard, who will deliver them to you at the ation of your journey. By no means thrust y Packages under the seat of the e. Your property will not be any safer in wn custody than in that of the Guard, and, in getting it in and out of the carriage, it robably prove an inconvenience to your passengers. In the multiplicity of Rail- flairs it may sometimes happen that, after ir precaution, your Luggage may is-sent. If this accident should occur, otice of it immediately, and, for further write on the first opportunity to entleman receives daily, from every first- tation in the kingdom, information of all g luggage, and an application to him will ly afford a clue to the missing articles, they have been positively stolen.

ilway Companies do not hold iselves responsible for Lug- unless it be Booked; and Parcels of value must be declared as such, and In- according to each Company's regulated s. Neither are the Companies accountable for articles left in the carriages or "waiting-rooms," but such things are deposited in a room, and properly labelled, with the date, train, &c., upon which they are found. They are kept for a period of twelve months, when, if no claimant appears, they are advertised, and sold by auction, the proceeds going to the Company's general revenue.

For the better security of the property of passengers a "Cloak-room" is provided at the principal stations. Here articles may be left in charge of the Company's servant for a charge of 1*d.* or 2*d.* each; it is, therefore, wiser for passengers to avail themselves of this provision than to leave their property unprotected, and run the risk of its entire loss.

Be sure to be at the Station several minutes before the time for the departure of the train by which you propose to travel. Hurried excitement and bustle will throw you into a perspiration, which will be fatal to all comfort during your ride, and will expose you to the danger of catching cold.

Many travellers boast of their dexterity in catching the train at the last moment, but this habit displays a foolish vanity, and is attended with many risks. Be careful that the booking-clerk gives correct change and a proper ticket, as mistakes cannot be easily rectified after you have left the counter. Your ticket should afterwards be carefully preserved, for if it be lost you will be required to repay your entire fare. Should the ticket be afterwards found, or should other evidence satisfy the managers that you really did pay your fare at the proper time, the second fare will be returned, but this process of proof will subject you to much inconvenience and delay. To obviate this danger a Ticket-holder has been invented, which may be hung round the neck by a small ribbon, or may be attached to the button of the coat by an elastic cord. It may be had at the stall of every station for a few pence. Besides securing the ticket from danger, it is always within reach when passengers are summoned to answer to the peremptory call, "Tickets ready."

If you have the opportunity select a seat with the back to the motion: thus you will avoid an annoying and dangerous draught which always blows on the opposite side. But should these favourite seats be already occupied, do not persist in having all the windows closed. It will generally be enough to close that one on the side from which the wind blows. Fresh air is of greater importance even than the avoidance of draughts, and, indeed, a Railway-carriage full of passengers, and with all the windows closed, will soon be filled with vitiated air that is insufferable, and suggestive only of the Black Hole of Calcutta. An improvement in the construction of Railway-carriages, which would secure ample ventilation irrespective of the windows, has long been demanded, but has not yet been attained. It is true that in some modern carriages small ventilators have been introduced above the windows, but these are very imperfect, and beside, in unpardonable ignorance, they are often closed by a class of travellers who have an invincible repugnance to fresh air.

To fortify yourself against cold and draughts a little attention to simple preparations is all that is required. A cap for gentlemen and a hood for ladies will sufficiently protect the face and neck. A rug will also add materially to comfort.

Smoking is strictly prohibited in Railway-carriages and at all Railway Stations. This is an excellent rule, and no gentleman of good breeding and of correct taste will ever attempt to infringe it. The fumes of tobacco soon fill the limited area of a carriage, add to the impurity of the air, already vitiated, and in many instances have caused persons to be seized with violent illness.

On no account whatever should passengers attempt to enter or to quit a carriage while it is in motion. Many sad accidents have resulted from this indiscretion, and therefore, by the bye-laws of every Railway Company, it is made an offence which very properly subjects the offender to a fine of 40*s*.

ged Prospectus.—The leading feature of this Company is, that it investigates the merit of vention submitted to it, by the aid of scientific and practical men, selected with special regard r qualifications as impartial judges. Such inventions as are approved are patented or regis-nd manufactured by the Company, for sale, on a scale sufficient to establish their value, with-t to the inventor, who will share, under agreement, in all profits arising therefrom.

n earnest of these intentions, the managing committee have secured a long lease, on most ad-eous terms, of extensive premises, containing a spacious manufactory, provided with suitable where models can be made and tried, and patented articles manufactured for sale.

able patents, already arranged for, are now being so manufactured at a nett profit of 300 per while several very promising inventions are under consideration.

advantages thus enumerated justify the directors in recommending the undertaking to the
of small capitalists, as an investment well worthy their special consideration.

the large mass of inventors are unable to carry out their designs is a fact patent to most prac-servers. It is equally true that a great number of cases only require the judgment and kindly nce of scientific and practical men to render them productive of immense public benefit. It is overtible that our national importance and wealth have been more promoted by inventors than other class of men. Arkwright, Watt, Cort, Stephenson, and others scarcely less eminent, have ed an amount of wealth almost beyond calculation, though their inventions were received at first oldness and incredulity. In short, all the improvements for our convenience and comfort, dating state of barbarity to one of high civilisation, are but the cumulative results of inventive ingenuity.
ust not be overlooked by the shareholder that a patent gives an exclusive trade with the cusof the world, and that this Company will possess in no common degree such advantages as will, average, be immensely productive, and insure a dividend that may surprise and must satisfy estors. Applications for Shares, and full Prospectuses giving the fullest information, to be made, ally or by letter, to the Secretary at the offices, as above. [396

A B C RAILWAY GUIDE.

This day, price 1s. 6d., post free 1s. 8d., the Fourth and Cheap Edition of

THE AUTOBIOGRAPHY OF A BEGGAR BOY.

'A book of great interest, and of no inconsiderable profitableness. The author was in his twelve years of his life a ragged vagrant, and he narrates not only his life then, but the progress from that condition, by dint of virtuous determination and untiring energy, to the and respectability of a now mature manhood. He points out the difficulties, mistakes, of a man like himself, uneducated and unaided; but he shows what resolution and hon may accomplish, and the reader feels that the beggar boy has become a real man, in earnest, and wise. Glimpses of the social life of the last half-century give their additional interest to the personal story.'—Nonconformist.
